Please read this. Its is a plan to enable you have writing jobs inflow after this training

Check the tables below to join some of freelance writing communities' I've come across on social media. Please make an effort to join them all. If some asks why you want to join just say you have a passion in writing and would like to keep up with current trends and network with likeminded people. That will definitely get you in.

Always check for writing job adverts and alerts from these communities, there are tonnes of them from local clients and even international. There are people who sell accounts; you can strike a good deal. I usually advise first time writers who have zero prior writing experience, don't get greedy and rush to buy expensive accounts with top dollar pay which get penalized and closed from lack of work quality or experience.

Here is a secret to be successful and grow fast as a writer from scratch. After you have learnt the ropes and tricks and what it takes from our 2 to 3 weeks writing training, get a local client from that list and work under them for some time. The good thing about it is that they will check your work and send it back to you with correction suggestions before submitting it to their client, this gives you learning leverage. You get paid at the end of the day; consider it as paid internship after our training.

Here is some brutal truth, If you immediately start working for an account, they'll assume you are a pro and when you upload your work, it goes straight to a client who also assumes you are a pro even if you are a newbie. If your work has issues you get penalized and sometimes your account gets closed. They just assume you are a bad writer but in real sense you are just a newbie with potential and with practice you become an expert. So after this training check job alerts from the list below to get a direct client to work for as you gain experience, that's how experts are made anyway.

Psst, this is how it started. After I completed my training years ago, which was brutally expensive by then; a whopping 5000/- for a week's course, my first client was from facebook, I worked under them and after a while picked another one. After five months I was working for five clients simultaneously which ensured me work inflow. The good thing about working for direct clients is that you can get as many as you can and costs you nothing.

If one client delays to pay in time or reduce to send work, you got more in your list who will pay and give you jobs. You don't have all your eggs in one basket. Its called freedom of options!! Sweet huh? BUT, when you buy a writing account, first, it costs you money and if one fails, you probably had only one account. Talk of all eggs in one basket!!

After you are confident you are okay and have experience, you can now buy an account. Buy it with a mentality of getting direct high paying clients from them. If you are not comfortable buying accounts you can start your own blog and show case your writing skills. This will attract more clients and also earns you some passive income when you decide to start selling via your blog.

More is explained in the training. Join us let's see how we can bring value and help you earn income, that's why we are here anyway.

As promised here are the groups. Make sure you use your profile to apply for jobs; it will get you instant results. Contact us and we will guide you how to make a good profile. Here are the communities:
